Why should I get the Vaccine?

You should get the vaccine to protect yourself and avoid being a “superspreader.”

Aren't most severe cases of COVID-19 in older people?

No, young people can be severely affected as well and can have long-term effects. More and more younger people have been dying from COVID infections.

Doesn't the Vaccine cause infertility?

No, the Vaccine does NOT cause infertility; this is a myth.

Aren't the side effects of the Vaccine worse than having COVID-19?

Most people don't get any side effects from the vaccine. On the flip side, getting COVID can be very dangerous and have long-lasting effects. 1 out of 3 people infected with COVID has a new neurological or psychological diagnosis within three months of their infection. COVID is serious, and it can change your life in a bad way. The vaccine might make you feel tired or achy for a day or two, but it can save your life.

Do you really need both shots of the Vaccine?

Yes, you need both doses because they work together as a team – the first dose primes your immune system, and the second dose solidifies your immunity.

Is the Vaccine even effective?

The vaccine is very effective! The vaccine is up to 95% effective (depending on the manufacturer) at preventing COVID-19 infection. If you get exposed to COVID after being fully vaccinated, you don't need to quarantine!

I heard you can still get COVID-19 after being vaccinated, so why would I want it?

The chances of getting COVID after being vaccinated are very low – it does happen to some people, but this is rare. Vaccine can lessen severity.

Can I get COVID-19 from the Vaccine?

Absolutely not! The vaccine doesn't contain any actual virus, so it's physically impossible to get the virus from the Vaccine.

I already had COVID-19; do I even need the Vaccine?

The antibodies your immune system made when you had COVID may only last about three months if that. You should still get vaccinated to boost your immunity, prevent getting Covid again, or spread it to others.
